Cooking School in High School Auditorium Attended By Hundred and Fifty; Many Valuable Awards

School Conducted by Mrs. Charlotte K. Runey—Miss McInerney, Miss Faul, Assist—Splendid Cooperation by Local Merchants and Business People—Better Sight Lamp Award Goes to Gilbert Hackett of Woodhull.

The ADVERTISER-SENTINEL cooking school, believed to be the first of its kind in Addison, was held in the auditorium of Addison High School Friday and Saturday, August 9 and 10. Approximately one hundred and ten people attended the opening session Friday afternoon. One hundred and fifty were present Saturday afternoon and almost as many braved the drenching torrents of Saturday night to attend the final session.

Mrs. Charlotte K. Runey, graduate of the Home Economics College of Cornell University, was in charge of the school. She was assisted by Miss Florence McInerney, graduate of Mechanics Institute, Rochester. Miss Faul of Elmira also assisted. Mrs. Runey was introduced to the audience at the opening session by Maurice E. Miller, editor of the ADDISON ADVERTISER and WOODHULL SENTINEL, who emphasized the importance of the cooking school as a work of community service.

An interesting and instructive program of recipes was demonstrated by Mrs. Runey at each of the three sessions. The latest information regarding modern methods of cooking by electricity was given, also the economy of using modern cooking and electrical appliances. Those who attended are unanimous in commending the work of Mrs. Runey and the ADVERTISER-SENTINEL feels fortunate that her services could be procured for the cooking school in Addison.

Excellent cooperation was given by local merchants and business firms who donated many articles of merchandise for award as prizes. At the close of the school, attractive recipe boxes were awarded through the cooperation of the New York Central Electric Corporation to all who had attended each of the three sessions.

Among those who received free merchandise awards, donated by Addison merchants, were as follows:

Consensus of opinion among the "old-timers" about the village indicates that the photo was taken about forty-four years ago. George I. True, a prominent Addison business man of the time, headed the parade, mounted on a white horse. Other Addison men in the ranks include C. J. Hill, Festus Wheaton, Ross Jones, Frank Oscar and Lew Shockey.

Particularly noticeable are the elaborate decorations with which all the Main Street stores were trimmed. Flags and bunting were used freely, not only in front of the stores but all the way to the top of the buildings.

Party of Four Rescued From Car in Flood Waters Near Freeman By Stanley Teachman

Addison Young Man Performs Heroic Act Saturday Evening—Leo Gardner of Addison, Three Friends From Elkland, Car Occupants—Party Removed in Teachman Car to Medical Aid at Lawrenceville.

Heroic efforts of Stanley Teachman undoubtedly saved the lives of four people, including Leo Gardner of Addison, from the raging flood waters at Freeman last Saturday night.

Mr. Teachman, popularly known as "Bucky" in Addison and vicinity, is employed at the Elkland Tannery. Saturday evening, in company with Mrs. Teachman, the former Miss Dolores Zeliff, he left Elkland at about eight-thirty to return to his home here. The rain was falling in torrents as they drove from Elkland, but they continued on to Nelson and then turned toward Addison. As they approached the filling station of Wilbur Bullock, near Freeman, the water covered the road to such a depth that it was considered inadvisable to venture further. After waiting at the station for some time, another car came down the road and continued past. The Teachmans fell in behind and followed the car ahead at a close distance.

Nearing Freeman, at a point adjacent to the residence of Silas Ripley, the leading car, a dark red coupe, drove directly into the path of the flood tide where it crossed the highway, the roadbed having been completely swept away. The car was pitched about by the current and was seen by the occupants

THE RHODE ISLAND ELECTION

Politicians and lay observers of political trends have been busy the last few days drawing their own deductions concerning the first rebuke of the New Deal in the Rhode Island elections. These resulted in the election of a Republican Congressman and the refusal of the voters in practically every district in the state to do any more federal borrowing to build parks, etc. Charles Risk, the Republican who campaigned on an out-and-out anti-New Deal platform, swept to victory by more than twelve thousand majority in a Democratic section which has returned majorities up to 25,000 for that party in recent elections.

Some of those who have analyzed the vote in Rhode Island say Mr. Risk was elected by labor groups who have become sick of the AAA processing taxes that boosted the cost of living, and were fed up on Administration experiments such as the defunct NRA. Others assert the American people have come to thoroughly distrust Mr. Roosevelt since his anti-constitution utterances, and Democrats united with Republicans in casting votes which revealed their displeasure of what the Administration has been doing. Certain it is that districts which have voted Democratic for twenty years, swung to the Republican column in this startling election.

Adherents to the minority party have not been slow in realizing this turn-over in Rhode Island places Republicans in the most commanding position they have enjoyed since the unfavorable Congressional election in 1930. For the first time since the depression started the Democrats have been put on the defensive and Republicans generally feel their opponents will have a hard time in explaining away the multitudinous mistakes of the alphabet group. As for the New Dealers, they are said to be scratching their heads over the fact one state in the Union has turned its back upon federal funds and served notice it does not intend to be led further into debt.

Having banked so heavily upon the appeal of this free spending splurge into which the country has been led by Washington, the New Dealers are trying to guess just what can be depended upon to win votes.

Actually the thinking person must regard Rhode Island's off-year Congressional election as a healthy sign the American people still can use their heads. President Roosevelt has been prone to consider his ideas more valuable than all the liberties guaranteed by our Constitution. Congress has been too subservient in passing legislation which the President with high-handed show of authority, has been bold enough to mark "MUST". Both legislative and executive branches of the government have been going along making laws which students of government believed would not be sanctioned by the higher courts. And when the Supreme court did preserve the Constitution with its unanimous NRA decision, Mr. Roosevelt wrongly reading the public mind, cast discrediting words at the sacred American document.

Some observers now state the President will be quick to interpret the Rhode Island vote, and will be seen to veer his policies toward the right wing. Yet this vacillating back and forth from left to right can hardly bring re-election to even so astute a politician as Mr. Roosevelt. The impractical, unconstitutional measures he has fathered will be too fresh in the minds of conservatives for them to flock to him with their ballots, while a large block of radical voters will surely be estranged if he turns his back on them now. Certainly in view of the record of his pre-election promises, conservatives cannot trust the President.

Most assuredly the Rhode Island election will make the Washington hot weather seem a lot hotter, besides spoiling Boss Farley's vacation fun.

SHOULD WE WEAKEN THE CONSTITUTION?

Suggestions to change the Constitution, in order to give the Federal Government powers the Supreme Court has decided it does not now possess, should be critically weighed by the American people.

Whether we realize it or not, it is the Constitution which protects the ownership and the sanctity of the home. It is the Constitution which safeguards the independence and rights of the workers. It is the Constitution which maintains the sanctity of contract. And, finally, it is the Constitution which guarantees and supports the rights, the liberties and the privileges for which the forefathers of the nation fought when they changed America from a foreign-dominated colony to a free nation dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Those who would change the Constitution would do so on the supposition that it is out of date—that it is no longer capable of meeting the problems, the conditions, the issues of the times. If that is true, human liberty is out of date. Individual freedom is out of date. Democratic government—which has as its guiding principle that the people are the masters, not the servants of government—is out of date. Private initiative and individual ambition are out of date.

Every time we tamper with the Constitution we weaken it. Under the existing Constitution, a delicate balance of power is maintained between the central government and the 48 state governments. The Federal Government is enabled to do that which individual states could not efficiently do—while the states are left free to make laws, rulings, regulations and policies that are in accord with the beliefs and needs of their people.

If we broaden the powers of the Federal Government we shall simply be giving bureaucracy a greater free and unchecked field for action—at the expense of the states, of industry, of workers, of every citizen.

"GRAVY" VERSUS CANDIDATES

A number of lawyers throughout Steuben County, who happen to hold a grain or two of ambition, have been surprised by the attitude of District Attorney George Pratt in clinging tenaciously to the office with which the voters endowed him, while reaching for another higher office within their power to bestow. "Why", they ask, "should one man in the county come to believe he can retain our good will by a gesture which may result in a logical Republican office being handed over to the Democrats?"

There is considerable logic in that question, when one probes for the truth behind this race for Surrogate Judge. Mr. Pratt is now District Attorney of Steuben County, by virtue of his election to a term that does not expire for more than a year. If he should resign immediately the Governor would name a successor, some Democrat to hold office until Jauuary 1, 1936, but in the meantime the voters could nominate and elect a district attorney to serve from January 1, 1936 until the end of Mr. Pratt's elected term. If Mr. Pratt becomes the Surrogate the Governor will appoint a Democrat to hold office all next year. In other words Mr. Pratt is trying to do Aesop's dog one better—he intends to cling tenaciously to the juicy bone now in his mouth, at the same time accomplishing the impossible feat of getting his jaw set into a bigger bone reflected in the pool of "political ambitions". Now Mr. Pratt knows he cannot possibly keep both of those bones in his mouth at the same time, so he reasons he will hang to the sure thing, while snapping uncertainly at the bigger bone; the reflection of which looks so enticing.

Which is quite logical reasoning for a man to whom personal ambition is the first and all- impelling motive, transcendent over every impulse of loyalty to a party which has showered him with high honors, and the largest salary ever paid to a Steuben County district attorney. In effect Mr. Pratt is saying to all the other Republican lawyers of Steuben County: "You fellows may sit back and watch me take mine! If I lose the nomination for Surrogate Judge, I'll still be District Attorney; if I win the nomination and election, I'll be 'sitting pretty' even though the Governor does appoint a worthy Democrat to the office which one of you, my fellow partymen, might have earned."

In a recent speech before a group of lawyers Mr. Pratt had considerable to say to the effect Republicans should get their "share of the gravy". Evidently Mr. Pratt meant by "Republicans", one particular Republican—George Pratt, should be entitled to get any and all "gravy" which happens to be stewing around election day. As far as the rest of the Republican lawyers of the county are concerned—well that is no worry for the present District Attorney. IF he can become the Surrogate he will be "sitting pretty" in the political picture, for some time to come. It is a long time since a Republican Surrogate Judge has had to contest his re-election with any member of the party.

Of course, Mr. Pratt may believe he does not stand much of a chance of winning the contest he has now entered. Possibly he realizes that now and then a man outside of Corning MIGHT be endorsed by the voters for a nomination. He should know that his opponent, Charles L. Crane, must stand in the eyes of most Republicans as the logical contender for Judge Wheeler's office, in-as-much as Mr. Crane ran a clean-cut race for the nomination six years ago and then strongly supported the man who had defeated him, in truly party spirit. He may realize the voters will weigh the fitness of himself for the office, with the life-long preparation of Charles L. Crane who is deemed one of the keenest probate lawyers in this section of the state. If he really thinks he cannot win, then his conscience may square itself.

Yet Mr. Pratt is entering this campaign under a distinct disadvantage. He is denying to some fellow-Republican the right to strive for an office he himself would discard if advancement came. He intends to be sure that whatever "gravy" there happens to be passing around Republican tables, George Pratt is going to get HIS share.

YOU AND YOUR CONSTITUTION

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman, Sentinels of the Republic

Recently a bill was introduced at Washington forbidding the Supreme Court to declare any Act of Congress unconstitutional.

It is one of many measures, similar in motive, now in Congressional committees. Its purpose is to give Congressmen the power to enact any laws they desire, regardless of the rights vested in the people by our Constitution.

Many Congressmen and bureaucrats, now held in restraint by the people through their Constitution, yearn for that power. To achieve it they are telling the people that in this era of shifting and uncertain standards they must look to Congress, rather than to the Constitution, for their rights, their opportunities and their security.

But they are wrong! Let's see why! Well, here are some reasons why every type of citizen who wants to remain a free and productive American must fight to protect his Constitution against inroads by ambitious demagogues at Washington:

The Home and Farm Owner: Because it is the Constitution—not the Congress or the Executive—which protects him in the ownership and the sanctity of his home and lands.

The Wage-earner: Because it is the Constitution—not the Congress—which safeguards his independence of action and the fruits of his toil.

The Business Man: Because it is the Constitution—not the Congress—which maintains the sanctity of contracts and his freedom to manage his own affairs.

The Professional Man: Because it is the Constitution—not the Congress—which guarantees him both the opportunity and the compensation for his enterprise.

The Young: Because it is the Constitution — not the Congress — which assures stability in government and in the affairs of life.

All Citizens: Because it is the Constitution — not the Congress — which assures them personal security, an equal voice in government, freedom of speech, freedom of religion and other rights demanded by self-reliant, self-respecting Americans.

My next article will discuss what could happen if Congress were granted power to ignore and override the Constitution.

New Deal's 'Incoherence' Found in Case of Tax Bill

By MARK SULLIVAN

THE tax bill illustrates two unfortunate aspects of the New Deal. The first is Mr. Roosevelt's disposition to think mainly in terms of mass emotion, of causing public feeling to move along whatever lines will serve the President at the moment. The second, closely related to the first, is the incoherence of the New Deal, its lack of any pattern, of any relation to any body of principles or any coherent scheme of society or government.

Mr. Roosevelt's message about the tax measure, in which he emphasized "distribution of wealth," was thrown into Congress June 19. What any man's motive may be is wholly a matter within his own mind and therefore cannot be identified surely. But at the time Mr. Roosevelt sent his tax message to Congress he had two reasons for desiring to influence public emotion. Three weeks before he had tried to stir the country to critical feeling about the Supreme Court decision invalidating N. R. A. That had gone badly for him and he had reason to divert the country to thinking of something else. Also, he had reason to try to offset the appeal of Senator Huey Long's "share the wealth" slogan, in order to diminish the possibility of Senator Long's starting a radical third party, which next year would take many votes from Mr. Roosevelt.

That these motives influenced Mr. Roosevelt in sending his "distribution of wealth" message seems a tenable inference. The inference is borne out by the surprise and dismay with which Democratic leaders in Congress received the message, by the evident expectation of the President that the message would not be acted on at this session, and by characteristics within the message. With its quotations from Andrew Carnegie and Theodore Roosevelt, it did not read like a message to Congress looking to specific legislation. Sending the message to Congress seemed merely one way of putting the ideas out and getting the public to think about them. That Congress should act upon the message at this time was an outcome forced upon the President, and upon a most unwilling Congress, by radicals who shrewdly "called" Mr. Roosevelt's hand.

The bill reflects no program for the management of the country's fiscal affairs and no philosophy of government. It does not even make any material progress toward "distribution of wealth." As respects incomes, Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion was that those of more than $1,000,000 a year be subjected to increased taxation. When tax experts looked into that they discovered it would touch a handful of people and yield the government only about $5,000,000 a year. As "distribution of wealth," that would be only about five cents a year for each person in the country. As taxation it would not pay the expenses of the government for half a day.

When the House, improvising some kind of measure that would save the President's face, decided to go far beyond the President's recommendation and increase the tax rate of all persons having incomes of more than $50,000 a year, it found that only 8,000 persons would be affected and the total yield would be only about $45,000,000 a year. As distribution of wealth that would be less than 50 cents a year for each of the population. As taxes it would not meet the government's expenditures for half a week. The total amount designed to be raised by the bill from all sources is $270,000,000. The total possible hope from the bill, assuming business recovery comes, would be, according to the Congressional committee, "as much as $350,000,000 to $450,000,000 in additional revenue annually." As "distribution of wealth" that would be some $4 for each person yearly. As revenue it would pay the government's expenditures for some two weeks.

The bill is written without relation to the government's fiscal operations as a whole, without relation to any general program of taxation or to any plan of balancing the budget. The measure illustrates a pungent passage uttered by Dr. Neil Carothers, professor of economics at Lehigh University: "I have no quarrel with economic planning. What I deplore is the lack of economic planning. What we have had is guesswork and blind experiment and vacillating and mutually destructive economic policies."

This "mutually destructive" characteristic of the parts of the New Deal has led some one to say that Mr. Roosevelt is taking America into a changed social order, not so far as he personally is concerned by consistent intention, but by blundering. From a similar source another "wisecrack" says that Mr. Roosevelt, driving the American car of capitalism, will run it into the ditch of communism, but if he were in Stalin's place, driving the Russian car of communism, he would run it into the ditch of capitalism.

Incidentally, the "mutually destructive" quality of New Deal measures is illustrated by the killing off of meat animals two years ago, followed today by importation of meat. I am told that at this moment the meat being served at the National Press Club at Washington comes from Poland. If that is true, the some 500 newspaper men who compose that lively club are missing an interesting subject of news that passes close under their own noses every day.

The amount of milk used for human consumption as estimated by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural economics was 100,713,000,000 pounds for 1934 as compared with 100,169,000,000 pounds in 1933, and with a record amount of 103,162,000,000 pounds in 1931.

Fewer hogs in Germany, more hogs in Denmark and the smallest pig crop in many years in the United States are prospects reported by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The Approaching War And American Policy

By WALTER LIPPMANN

BY NEXT month we shall have lived through the fourth year of anxiety over the prospects of peace. It will be the anniversary of Japan's invasion of Manchuria, and in all likelihood it will be celebrated by Italy's invasion of Ethiopia. In these four years there have been intervals when the threat of serious war seemed to diminish and it seemed unduly alarmist to believe that a serious war was in the making. Yet if we survey the four years as a whole there is no plausible way of avoiding the grim conclusion that the danger of war is greater today than it was four years ago, and that the forces making for war are in the ascendant over those making for peace.

No one is sufficiently the prophet to be more specific than that. It cannot be said, for example, that if the Ethiopian war takes place it will eventually spread to central Europe. But it has to be said that it might spread to central Europe, and that, if it did, the Continental belligerents of the World War would again be involved. The balance of power in Europe today is delicate and precarious and depends in very high degree upon Italy. Although Mussolini has given assurances that his African enterprise will not alter his European policy or impair his European influence, it is still true that wars are rarely concluded according to the plans of those who start them. Whether he wins a quick and decisive victory or becomes entangled in a long colonial struggle, the situation will be critical, because the German re-armament is proceeding and the internal tension in Germany is manifestly increasing.

The clarification of American policy has become an urgent necessity. The reason why it is urgent is that if there is war in Ethiopia next month the government will have to declare a neutral policy. In itself this would not be momentous, for there is no likelihood of our being seriously entangled in a war between Italy and Ethiopia. Italy controls the seas. Ethiopia has no navy and no aeroplanes.

What makes the matter so urgent is that the line we take in this war will establish a precedent in the event of a much more serious European war. The precedent would not be absolutely binding, to be sure, but it will have great weight. It will be embarrassing not to follow it. It will seem very unneutral not to follow it. It will become an important element in the calculations of all the European powers.

There are a number of reasons why it is so very difficult to formulate a satisfactory neutral policy. For American opinion is in favor of several objectives that are not easy to reconcile. Thus:

1. We desire not to be drawn into war to defend our trade or our honor.

2. But we would insist on not being insulted and outraged;

3. And we would not willingly let our normal export trade be destroyed.

4. We would like to be impartial as well as neutral;

5. But a policy of equal treatment for both belligerents would mean either that we became the tacit ally of the dominant sea power or came into conflict with it in defending our neutral right to trade with the blockaded power. If, for example, we prohibit shipments of munitions to both Italy and Ethiopia, the equal rule would prevent Italy from getting munitions she can get, whereas Ethiopia would only be prevented from getting munitions that she could not get anyway. If we insist on the right to ship to both, we have to deal with the Italian Navy, and we are, in effect, using our sea power to make up for Ethiopia's lack of sea power.

Historical experience shows plainly that in wars involving naval powers it is difficult, if not impossible, to defend trade and honor without entanglement and to be impartial in fact as well as neutral in law. For that reason there is no way of stating a general rule of neutrality which will be applicable to all conceivable wars, will be just to all belligerents, will be consonant with the national dignity, will protect legitimate trade and will surely keep us out of war.

What, then, is the wise thing to do? For a beginning, it seems to me, that the government should not attempt to declare a brand new neutral policy in the Ethiopian war, because that would establish a precedent which may rise to plague it later. It will be better to adhere to the traditional doctrine with only such simple modifications as to have no complicated, far-reaching, and unpredictable consequences. The most obvious modification of the traditional policy would be to prohibit the shipment in American bottoms of munitions to either belligerent. Possibly that rule might be extended to prohibit the shipment of munitions in American ships outside the Western Hemisphere. Possibly the rule might be extended further to prohibit American citizens from traveling on ships carrying munitions outside the Western Hemisphere.

Rules of this sort would not be a guaranty of immunity in a serious war. But they would reduce the danger of very serious embarrassments and, above all, of deliberate efforts

First Aid For Flooded Homes

Question: How can clothes soaked during the flood be disinfected?

Answer: Clothes can be disinfected by boiling for 1 hour in water that covers them. Those that may be spoiled by boiling, such as woolens and colored cottons or linens, may be disinfected by hanging in the sunlight for 2 hours or more. Sun may fade some clothing if the color is not fast. These may be redyed however, and should be sunned to be safe to wear.

Notice: Any articles of clothing that were in the water four or five days are probably ruined. Therefore it may not be worth while to put much time or effort into trying to reclaim it.

Question: How can you get rid of odors in basements?

Answer: You can get rid of odors in basements by first scrubbing the basement to remove any dirt, and by then using chloride of lime, common rock salt or stock salt and, in certain cases, acid phosphate.

Chloride of lime. Sprinkle chloride of lime over the basement floor and allow it to stay there until the floor dries. Then sweep it up and scrub the floor. This material will disinfect the basement as well as remove objectionable odors.

Common rock salt or stock salt. This is a mild substance and may be used of the odor of chloride of lime is disliked. Sprinkle the salt over the basement, and, if the floor is dry, spray or pour a small amount of water over the salt. This mixture of salt and water makes a strong brine that should be allowed to stand on the floor for about an hour or two, or until it dries. When it dries, sweep the floor and then wash it with soap and water. This material will disinfect the basement as well as remove objectionable odors.

Acid phosphate. Farmers commonly use this substance in-doors to remove ammonia-like odors. It can be used also to remove odors from basements with dirt bottoms, but it is not a disinfectant.

Odors, although unpleasant, are not themselves harmful to health.

Recent Court Decisions Hit The New Deal

The march of New Deal legislation through the courts continues. Within the past three weeks, three major Administration measures have been subjected to judicial scrutiny—and two of the three have been found wanting. Last words, of course, will be said by the Supreme Court, when it meets for its next term, but present decisions provide a lead on what the highest court of all is likely to decide.

First case concerned the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This bureau pays farmers for restricting their crops, raises the money through processing and floor taxes. Plaintiff in the case was a milling company, which had refused to pay $82,000 demanded by the collector of internal revenue. In the district court, the Government was upheld, and the company was ordered to come through with the $82,000. It appealed to the circuit court in Boston, which reversed the lower court, by a 2-to-1 decision, and held that Congress did not possess the power to delegate taxing authority to the Secretary of Agriculture. If this decision is given validity by the Supreme Court, the Government may have to refund processing taxes already collected, and pay future benefits out of regular funds.

Second case concerned the policy of the Public Works Administration in condemning land to use for low-cost federal housing projects. This is very close to the heart of Secretary Ickes, who has planned a $250,000,000 slum clearance and low-cost housing program. Suit was brought by a property owner who did not wish to sell at the Government's price, wished to bargain for greater compensation. The Cincinnati circuit court held for the plaintiff, said that the Government has not the power to condemn land for this purpose.

Third case involves one of the most debated of Administration activities—the Tennessee Valley Authority. A few months ago a suit was brought to restrain the Authority from selling electric power in competition with private producers and to invalidate contracts made between the authority and various towns in the Tennessee Valley area. Federal District Judge Grubb held for the plaintiff, decided the contracts were illegal. The Government appealed to the Appellate court in New Orleans, and the judges overruled Judge Grubb, decided that the Government can sell power in competition with private parties.

Thus the New Deal came to the bar three times—won once, and lost twice. This is similar to past experience, and illustrates a fact recognized by Administration friends and opponents alike—that much of the legislation proposed and pushed by the President cannot be held valid without Constitutional change. And that promises to be a prime plank in next year's general election.

Democrats on the Defensive as Republican Chairman Fights On

Albany—As a result of the intensive drive of Republican "shock troops" headed by Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton, the Democratic Party in the state has been definitely placed on the defensive for the first time in many years.

Beginning May 15, Chairman Eaton took to the road with a brief case filled with hard-hitting addresses carrying the war direct to Democratic administrations in both state and nation. Since that time Mr. Eaton has made more than fifty speeches, traveled through forty-eight counties, and being ably assisted by such forceful orators as Senator George R. Fearon, Senator Joe R. Hanley, Assemblyman Irving M. Ives, William B. Groat, Jr., Col. William J. Donovan and a score of other Republican orators skilled in the rough and tumble school of fast-moving campaigns.

"We have the Democrats on the defensive", said Mr. Eaton, "and we propose to keep them there. Our campaign is predicated on definite issues affecting the people of the state, and we propose to keep hammering away right up to Election Day. Complete harmony prevails in the Republican organization in the state, and Republicans have stopped fighting each other and are concentrating on our opponents. The Republican victory in Rhode Island has given our fight here greater impetus and our campaign will grow in intensity with each passing week."

Batavia Rally Draws Wide Attention

With Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, having accepted the invitation of the Republican organization of Genesee County to be the principal speaker at the big rally to be held at Batavia on August 21, the eyes of political observers are turning to the impending function with much interest. Col. Knox has been frequently mentioned as a possible candidate for the nomination for President, and is expected to lay down a bristling barrage against the New Deal in his talk, which will mark his first public appearance this year in New York State. Appearing with him on the speaking program will be Chairman Eaton, Col. Donovan and Congressman James W. Wadsworth. Political reporters from all parts of the state are expected to "cover" the meeting which, County Chairman A. D. Sanders has promised, will be the largest held in the county in many years.

Eaton Flood Relief War Brings CCC Reversal

The persistent attacks by Republican State Chairman Eaton and Congressman Bert Lord on the handling of flood relief work in upstate counties by state and national administrations, has resulted in President Roosevelt reversing his decision as to the use of CCC men in the flood-ravaged counties. Mr. Eaton, springing to the aid of the farmers whose land was ruined by the floods, charged that "farmers were as bad off today as they were after the flood-waters had reached their peak". His attack on both state and national administrations drew the fire of Governor Lehman, Work Relief Administrators in Washington, and Congressman Alfred F. Beiter, Democrat of Erie County. The Republican leader stood his ground and, with Congressman Lord, had much to do with the President's recall of his order which sent the CCC men away from the flood districts and back to their camps. The Roosevelt reversal came on the eve of a move by Republican Congressmen to expose Democratic handling of flood relief on the floor of the House. Mr. Eaton received hundreds of letters from upstate farmers applauding his attacks on the handling of flood relief work, as did Congressman Lord.

State Committee Congratulates Risk

Acting for the Republican State Committee, Chairman Eaton wired his congratulations to Judge Charles S. Risk, successful Republican candidate for Congress in the Rhode Island elections. Mr. Eaton also wired congratulations to Pierce H. Brereton, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Rhode Island. Mr. Eaton's telegram to the Congressman-elect follows:

"Please accept our sincere congratulations on your inspiring and decisive victory in your drive against the New Deal. Your victory in your state gives further indication of a Republican victory in the nation in 1936."

Chairman Brereton, replying to Mr. Eaton's wire said: "Thank you for your congratulations. The Republicans of Rhode Island join with you in feeling that the result in Rhode Island on August 6th is good omen for 1936."

Desmond Opens Reform Drive

Senator Thomas C. Desmond, Newburgh Republican, has opened a state-wide campaign for adoption of the Fearon constitutional amendment for county government reform. The amendment, sponsored by Senator George R. Fearon of Syracuse, will be submitted to voters at the November elections. Senator Desmond made his opening address for the amendment at Elmira last week. "Adoption of this amendment" he said, "will make possible the complete modernization of local government throughout the whole state, with resulting savings of many millions of dollars to the taxpayers and increased efficiency of governmental services." It is predicted that Governor Lehman, ex-Governor Smith and Mayor LaGuardia are expected to take the stump in favor of the proposal.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Addison and Vicinity Suffered Another Disastrous Flood

Addison homes on the south side of the village were caught in another bad flood Saturday evening when Tuscarora Creek rushed over its banks. The flood was caused by the same torrential rains which started many of the mountain streams south and west of Addison on a rampage that tore out roads, swept away bridges and tore houses from their moorings.

This vicinity was visited with a storm shortly after six o'clock Saturday evening which became a veritable cloudburst. The rain continued intermittently through the evening and Tuscarora Creek started raising rapidly at nine o'clock, gaining headway for an hour and a half when it burst over its banks and overflowed on Cleveland street and South street. The rising muddy waters plunged more than a score of householders in despair,, as many of the cellars had recently been cleaned from the flood of a month ago.

The water eddied around back of the school building and for a time it was feared the equipment would again be flooded. Bad enough damage was suffered as it was, as the athletic field and tennis courts had just been dragged and smoothed last week in preparation for use after the last inundation, and Saturday's flood ruined all chances for athletic competition on the grounds this summer.

Fortunately the Canisteo River did not rise appreciably, so the creek spent itself and began to drop at about 2:00 A. M. Sunday, without creating as much havoc as the July flood. The villages of Elkland and Osceola to the south-west, suffered badly, the latter being badly gutted by Holden Brook which tore through its center like a tidal wave. The main highway bridge in Osceola was torn out, houses were ruined and one residence and the entire yard were torn away.

Between Addison and Elkland thousands of dollars of damage was done to highways and bridges, when Freeman Brook went on a tear in its short but steep descent from Woods Corners to Tuscarora Creek. Practically every bridge along this creek was weakened, and in several places large sections of the road were torn away. One of the worst cuts was made just below the Silas Ripley place where the road was undermined just before Leo Gardner drove on the spot with his car. The weight of the machine broke off this overhanging roadbed sending the car and four passengers rolling over and over in water some six or eight feet deep. Only the heroic effort of Stanley Teachman was responsible for saving the lives of Gardner and his companions.

Driving was a precarious matter all the way from Freeman to Elkland on the day after the flood, the road being full of drop-offs, cuts and loose boulders.

Stocking Run to the north of Addison was another stream which went on the rampage, tearing out temporary bridges erected after the July flood. All in all many thousands of dollars damage has been suffered by the taxpayers in the latest unlashing of the thunder clourds.

John Lyon, Prominent Newswriter, Dies at Tucson, Arizona, Following Extended Illness of Many Years

Death Comes to Former Addisonian at Veterans Hospital at Tucson — Published "Silver Bugle", Boys' Semi-Weekly, with Carl Stephens Thirty Years Ago—Ashes to Be Sent Here for Interment.

had not been engaged in business since failing health forced him to retire from The Arizona Daily Star staff in 1928.

"He had been active in civic life until two and one-half months ago however, when he was placed in the Veterans' Hospital, and was able to visit the Lions club picnic at the Mission grove two weeks ago.

"Funeral services will be held at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Reilly chapel, with Rev. Oscar J. Rainey, pastor of St. Andrew's chapel, officiating. The body will be sent to Phoenix for cremation.

"Mr. Lyon leaves his wife, Mrs. Fern Delk Lyon and two daughters by a former marriage, Mrs. Betty Rannels of Tucson and Miss Mabel Lyon of Harrisburg, Pa. His home was at 1141 East Elm street.

"Mr. Lyon had his first newspaper experience at the age of 14 in Addison, N. Y., the city in which he was born and in whose schools he received his grammar and high school education.

"In 1895, he and a youthful friend, Carl A. Stephens, founded "The Silver Bugle," a boys' semi-weekly paper which they published for four and one-half years. The paper, first of its kind to receive a second class matter permit from the U. S. post office, gained considerable recognition outside of Addison, but was abandoned in 1900 when the firm of Stephens and Lyon reluctantly admitted that they had outgrown the enterprise.

"Already having served as a printer's devil, Mr. Lyon established the printing house of Moore and Lyon in Trenton, N. J., in 1903.

"In later years he also owned a printing plant in Indiana, Pa., and worked in the composing rooms of several newspapers, including that of the Corning, N. Y., Evening Leader.

"Mr. Lyon enlisted in the army in March, 1918, being sent from Columbus, Ohio, to Kelly field, Texas, where he was assigned to the aviation section of the signal corps.

"He later was sent to the aviation ground school at the University of Texas in Austin, but was invalided by pneumonia and spent several months in the hospital at Fort Sam Houston. Tuberculosis followed.

"Mr. Lyon went to San Francisco after the war and became head of the printing and engraving department of the W. A. Plummer Manufacturing company, serving in that capacity three years.

"He next went to Santa Rosa, Calif., to become advertising manager of the Santa Rosa Republican. He there met Miss Fern Delk, auditor for the newspaper, and they were married in San Rafael, Calif., in July, 1925.

"Mr. and Mrs. Lyon came to Tucson, December 31, 1925. After serving six months in the advertising department of the Tucson Citizen, Mr. Lyon became associated with the advertising department of the Star in July, 1926.

"He remained with the paper until August, 1928, when failing health forced him to retire. He served as automobile editor of the Star during this period, and his weekly column, "By the Way" was a popular Sunday morning feature.

"Mr. Lyon was active in the American Legion, served as adjutant of the Tucson D. A. V. post, and was honored for his Lions club activities in January, 1930, when the Tucson club made him a life member of the organization."

Commenting editorially concerning Mr. Lyon's death the Daily Star of August 1, published the following:

"John S. Lyon"

"Another name has been stricken from the rolls of those newspaper men who, in the past 10 years have worked to make the Arizona Daily Star an asset to the community which it serves. Since the Star came under the ownership and management of the late R. E. Ellinwood and W. R. Mathews the ranks of those who have served the paper have several times been thinned. This time our loss is John S. Lyon.

"Again it is an ex-service man, one whose health was broken in the service of his country. But broken health did not mean broken spirit, nor did it mar the kindly humor and lovable characteristics that befriended John Lyon to all who knew him.

"Even after illness made it imperative that he stop work, his interest in his profession never waned and it was only a few days before his death that he called to compliment a friend on a technical improvement to the paper to which he was always loyal, an improvement which none but a newspaper man would have noted.

"In many places John Lyon will be missed, but most of all among newsmen and advertising men with whom he once worked. For John S. Lyon was a newspaper man."

Six Little Sixers And Trio of Tri-Cos Turn Up For Game

For the past three weeks much ado has been made of the forthcoming city championship match between Keed Hibbard's Little Six Mohawks and the Stowell-mentored Tri-Cos. The battle was booked for yesterday, the 14th, and a group of frenzied fans were out early for the front line seats. Now, what the fans want to know is—what happened to the fracas, anyhow?

The umps were there, so were the scorekeepers and all the other retinue which follow up a highly tooted championship fray. So were the Keed's Little Sixers, that is, six of them were. So were the Tri-Cos, that is, a trio of them were. The six sixers were George Hopper, Charles Hickey, Joe Domenick, Bob Hallett, Billy Root and Hib himself. The Tri-Cos trio consisted of Phil Hickey, Jim Kelly and Glenn Beers. Possible six sixers and a trio of Tri-Cos are considered good enough for any opposition.

Anyway, according to the Tri-Cos emissary, the trio was ready for the shindig. They offered to fill up the game with replacements from the Knot Hole Gang of aspiring juveniles, or they were ready to go it alone against six-or sixty-Sixers. And, like Barkas of the story book, the Keed was willin'. It developed, however, several Sixers had got the wrong impression. They thought it was the swimmin' championship at stake and started to get their doodads on for a set of water polo. In the resulting confusion, the Keed, like Micawber, decided to put it off to another day.

In the meantime, who's champion?

Ward Beam's new 1935 Edition Congress of Daredevils plays a return engagement at the Chemung County Fair, Elmira, Saturday afternoon only, September 14th.

Most of the features of the thrill congress will be new, during the winter months Beam has scoured the whole country for new features and promises nine new events on the afternoon program. Grange Day At Fair, August 28

Syracuse, Aug. 12 — Following a time honored custom Wednesday, August 28 will again be "Grange Day" at the New York State Fair which opens here August 25 and closes September 2, Labor Day.

Under direction of Fred J. Freestone, Master of the New York State Grange the Patrons of Husbandry this year have arranged a new high attendance record for that day.

Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets Peter G. Ten Eyck will welcome as the chief speaker for the day, Louis J. Taber, National Master of the Grange. Other speakers at the session in Empire Court will be H. M. Stanley, Secretary of the State Grange and Mrs. John Fuller, Chairman of the State Grange Service and Hospitality Committee.

In honor of the thousands of Grange guests who will be in attendance a special program of events has been arranged by the heads of a number of the leading departments. There will be demonstrations by the girl members of the club in tea serving and other home-making arts; a Four H club uniform revue; demonstrations in room improvements; a baby beef sale in the young livestock pavilion feature judging in many of the livestock departments, band concerts, free vaudeville acts and other events.

In the Grange building there will be held in the afternoon the annual Grange Singing Contest which in former years has attracted thousands. This year all the songs to be sung by the participants must have been composed prior to the year 1900 and all the participants must be garbed in the styles in vogue during the time the song was popular. Competition in this contest has been very keen in the past with contestants from all parts of the state.

A special program is also being arranged for women members of the order in the Women's Building starting at four o'clock in the afternoon, while in the Indian Village a special series of ceremonial dances and songs will be offered.

Each year more graded cannery tomatoes are sold with the United States' standard grades as a basis.

Eggs and poultry prices are likely to continue at higher levels the rest of this year than for the same period a year ago, according to the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Farm Bureau Protests Reduction Tariff on Syrup

In a brief recently filed with the Tariff Commission, the farm bureau opposes the proposed reduction in the tariff on maple products.

The Federation claims that the present rate of 6c a pound on sugar and 4c on syrup is none too high, and points to the fact that a study of the cost of producing maple products by the Tariff Commission in 1925-26, recommended a rate of 8c for sugar and 5c for syrup.

To lower the present tariff would be to discriminate against the more than ten thousand farmers of New York State who produce maple products and the increased competition from Canadian products would further depress prices that in recent years have been below the cost of production.

The census of 1930 indicates that maple syrup and sugar was produced on more than 300 farms in Steuben County.

How, What and Why?

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York state colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Electric Windmills

H. C. asks: "Can windmills be used to generate electricity on New York farms?"

J. J. Pellett of the department of agricultural engineering answers: "Wind electric plants can be used in this state, but the system would have to be very large to generate and store up enough electricity to meet the needs of the farm. Useful winds are relatively short and infrequent.

"This would make the cost of the system so high as to be generally prohibitive, and the cost of yearly maintenance would be increased even more.

"Most of these plants in the United States are in the middle west. In that section nature supplies abundant winds, steady and of strong enough velocity to generate electricity for the farmers".

Books on Soil

E. G., Shelter Island Heights, asks: "Do you have any bulletins that deals with soils? Will you suggest any books on the same subject?"

Professor G. H. Serviss of the agronomy department answers: "Two bulletins have been sent to you: the first (P-619) tells about the classification and agricultural value of New York soils; the second (E-281) gives fertilizer recommendations for New York state.

"Perhaps the following books, which your local library may have, may help you: Farm Soils, by E. L. Worthen, published by John Wiley and Sons of New York City; and Nature and Properties of Soils, by Lyon and Buckman."

Sowing Red Clover

C. H. F., Macedon, asks: "When is the best time in August to sow red clover? I sowed buckwheat on a plot of ground this spring to fertilize the land and would like to plow it under to sow the clover.

"How much seed is needed to the acre, and does it have to be harrowed in after it is sown? What is the cost for a bushel in small lots?"

Professor John Barron of the agronomy department replies: "The plan of sowing buckwheat and then plowing it down in July to prepare for a clover seeding is excellent.

"Work the land down well. Frequent working helps to prepare the fine surface mulch so desirable for a clover bed. Sow the clover seed as early in August as possible, and not later than August 20.

"If you seed clover alone, without grass mixed with it, use 12 to 15 pounds to the acre. After the seed is spread over the surface of the soil, cover it in lightly with a weeder, a spike tooth harrow, or even a heavy brush such as a thorn apple tree.

"If your soil is well drained and very fertile, red clover alone will suffice. If drainage and fertility are not all that could be desired, it might be better to include some alsike with the red clover. Use six to eight pounds of red clover and two to four pounds of alsike clover to the acre.

"I am not informed on the current price of clover seed, but understand there has been some reductions recently."

Removing Side-Shoots

H. B., asks: "Should the side-shoots or 'suckers' on sweet corn be removed? If this is done, will the corn be earlier and the ears larger? If so, how and when should it be done?"

Arthur J. Pratt of the department of vegetable crops answers: "Removing suckers on sweet corn is a common practice on Long Island, but experiments carried out there for several years indicate that the practice is seldom or never profitable and may be injurious.

"I am sending a copy of Cornell bulletin E-509 which gives the results of these experiments."

Dairy Expert Recommends Production Records

Continuous production records on all cows in the herd are essential to success in dairying and the breeding of dairy cattle, according to the statement of Dr. E. E. Heizer, who addressed a county-wide meeting of dairymen at Bath last Wednesday.

Dr. Heizer is engaged in the analysis of all herds enrolled in the herd test of the American Holstein-Friesian Association, and is considered to be one of the foremost authorities in the United States on the breeding of dairy cattle.

Seventy-five per cent of all the dairy cows in Holland and 33 per cent of all the cattle of Denmark, he stated, are on test, as compared with 2 per cent of the cattle in the United States. Only cattle that meet high standards of production and type can be registered with the breed associations of Holland and Denmark. As a result a program of testing and culling, the Holstein cattle of Holland now yield an average production of 12,000 pounds of milk with butterfat tests of 3.8 per cent. In 1895 the average butterfat of cows on test in Holland was 2.95 per cent.

Dr. Heizer stressed the importance of a good herd sire, recommended providing bulls by the use of continuous herd records, and urged that dairymen form bull associations in order to keep in service those sires that transmit good production.

Dr. Heizer came to Steuben County through the courtesy of the New York State Holstein-Friesian Association. The meeting was organized by the Steuben County Farm Bureau.

The Approaching War And American Policies

to entangle this country. They would be consistent with the American feeling against profiting from war, and they would not be regarded as an ignominious surrender of national rights. To sell arms to those who can come here and take them away is different from carrying munitions under the protection of the American flag to a nation at war.

Except for a simple rule against carrying munitions in American ships outside this hemisphere, and for legislation to control the munitions trade by license, no other action by Congress now would be prudent. We do not know enough to make more comprehensive laws at this time. What we ought to do, however, is to keep continually in existence a kind of informal council, composed of the leaders of both parties in Congress, the members of the appropriate committees, and representatives of the State Department, to prepare tentative drafts of legislation for serious situations. The Navy has its paper war plans for all possible wars. The State Department and Congress ought to have neutral plans. Then, if war comes, a plan should be agreed upon and Congress called into special session to adopt it.

The obvious disadvantage of this procedure is that it renders our course incalculable to the European nations. But since their course is incalculable to us, it is hard to see how we can commit this country definitely in advance against all eventualities.

An Inept Tax Bill

By Shaw Livermore

The spectacle of Congress enacting a tax bill which was hastily presented to it, and has been even more superficially studied there because of the shortage of time allowed for passage, has continued to occupy the center of the Washington stage. Business men have been justifiably concerned at the cours of action which Administration leaders have pursued.

The tax bill ostensibly has two quite diverse purposes. It is a "share the wealth" measure of a feeble variety. As a sop to the vocal leaders of the perennial soak-the-thrifty group of vote-seekers, it resembles the silver act which was pushed through Congress last year to quiet the silver representatives of the West. That measure has become a tragic comedy of error in the eyes of thinking economists throughout the world. As a social measure to redistribute income, the present tax bill will rank little higher in the estimation of the same group. The second purpose of the bill is to raise revenue; it will raise comparatively little. Thus neither purpose seems to have a prospect of fruition.

During the present year the groundwork for a new federal tax program should be under careful scrutiny. A comprehensive bill ought to be framed, to be presented to Congress next spring. The excise taxes on many articles are still possible and desirable as a part of such a broadened program; the field has been ill-explored by the national legislators. For the long run, the taxation of upper-bracket incomes has been shown to be unsatisfactory for the simple reason that the tremendous shrinkage in taxable incomes in those groups during the depression raises havoc with revenue. More excise taxes on articles of general use (akin to liquor and tobacco taxes) would mean a sounder tax structure for the long, hard future which lies ahead.

KELLY CLOUTS VICIOUS DOUBLE TO BEAT MANSFIELD IN 11th INNING

Stowellmen Conquer Mansfield In Great Eleven-Inning Battle; Flynn Bests Sumner on Mound

Grange and Hickey Accept Nine Chances to Star in Outfield—Hewson and Hovey Star at Bat With Two Hits Apiece — Flynn Has Visitors at His Mercy the Last Three Innings — Hewson Thrills Fans with Two Slides Which Puzzle Basemen.

Sunday was a big day for Harold Stowell's Trico League ball team, when they defeated Mansfield in a great 11-inning game at Tuscarora Field.

Flynn proved to be too much for the visiting team until the fifth inning, when several errors and real hits put Mansfield in the scoring column.

As the game went into extra innings, with the score dead-locked at five runs apiece, Flynn became stronger, his curves took on a nasty drop which Mansfield could not solve. In the last half of the eleventh inning, Grange flied out to right field, Flynn popped to the first baseman and it looked like another inning but Hewson, next up, singled to short right field and stole second on the next pitch, Kelly worked Sumner to the count of one and two and then hit the ball clear to the woods, winning the game for the home team. Kelly had been drafted from the Mohawks Little Six team to the Tricos two weeks before and in that time has proved to be one of the strongest hitters on the team and at the end of the season should be one of the best first-basemen.

Grange, Hickey and Willis gave perfect support in the outfield. Grange and Hickey both caught hits at times which were labeled for sure homers by the old-time ball players.

Hewson and Hovey also gave good support. Hewson handled five chances without a slip. Hovey, although he had three errors to his credit, polled out two hits, driving in runs each time.

George LaChance was on the receiving end for Flynn. George dug many of Flynn's curves out of the dirt at critical times. Although George had only one safe hit to his credit, he gave the visiting pitcher considerable to worry about.

If Manager Stolwell's team can continue playing as they have been there is no reason why they should not finish high in the league standings.

The score follows:

Mohawks Close Season Sunday

The Little Six baseball season will come to a close Sunday, when Austinburg becomes the guests of "Keed" Hibbard's Mohawks at Tuscarora Field. The "Keed" is confident, as his team gave Austinburg a good trouncing a few weeks ago. Although "Hib" has lost in Kelly and Dick Willis, who are now playing with the town team, he feels he has rounded out a pretty good ball team for the finals.

Manager Hibbard must beat Austinburg to hold fourth place and a chance in the finals.

The probable line-up will be Hargrave at first. with C. Hickey at second, Hallett at short and Hultse at third. Hibbard, Tobin and Domenick will compose the outfield.

Wade will be the probable pitcher with Rice at the receiving end.

Six Hundred Musicians To Take Part in Montrose Massed Concert

Event Scheduled for August 26—Now Recognized as Leading Event of Its Kind in Eastern United States —Musicians From Many New York and Pennsylvania Communities to Participate.

On the evening of Monday, August 26 six hundred musicians from central and eastern Pennsylvania and southern New York State will gather at Montrose, Pa., to play in the famous annual Montrose Massed Band concert. Last year 10,000 music lovers attended this concert and the coming audience will undoubtedly be larger since many new places will be represented in the playing group.

The Montrose concert is now recognized as the leading event of its kind in eastern United States and has the support of nationally and internationally known bandsmen. Last year Mr. Ernest Williams remarked that it was one of the most musical massed band concerts he had ever heard.

The feature number of the evening will be a cornet trio consisting of Leonard Smith, Joseph Frey and Ned Mahoney. These three are artists on their instruments and are well known for their recent appearances with the Goldman Band of New York City.

The Montrose Massed Band concert is not in any sense a money making proposition, its sole purpose being to create a greater appreciation of bands and band music. A cordial invitation is extended to all musicians to attend and play in the band. The concert will begin at 8:30 P. M. There is no admission charge, the expenses of the concert being covered by a collection and the sale of seats.

Some of the towns and cities contributing musicians this year are: Pennsylvania — Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Dickson City, Old Forge, Carbondale, Honesdale, Hawley, Clarkes-Summit, Kingston, Pittston, Tunkhannock, Meshoppen, Laceyville, Wyalusing, Monroetown, Canton, Troy, Sayre, Factoryville, Hallstead, Harford, Berwick, State College, Williamsport, Harrisburg, Easton, etc. New York—Binghamton, Johnson City, Endicott, Owego, Waverly, Hancock, Windsor, Deposit, Afton, Bainbridge, Oxford, Walton, Delhi, Green, Whitney Point, Cortland, Syracuse and others.

of the Teachman car to turn over no less than seven times. Screams of the occupants could be heard as the car was bounced about.

Leaping from his own conveyance. "Bucky" dashed courageously into the flood stream and swam to overtake the red coupe. Eventually, he maneuvered the auto into position near the branches of an upturned tree and by holding the spare tire of the car with one arm and a limb of the tree with the other, the car was lodged into a stable position on a ledge of rock. Then began the work of rescue.

Removing two girls and a man, one at a time through the car window Stanley swam with them to a safe location, then returned for the driver of the car, who was found to be Leo Gardner of Addison. Mr. Gardner's foot had been caught in the steering apparatus and he had suffered serious head injuries. The entire party of four was immediately conveyed by the Teachmans to the residence of L. H. Van Vliet where first aid was administered. Later, they were taken to Lawrenceville where the injured parties received medical attention. The three members of the group accompanying Mr. Gardner were all from Elkland. After leaving them at the home of a sister of one of the girls, living near Lawrenceville, Mr. and Mrs. Teachman took the Susquehanna Trail back to Addison where they arrived at about two o'clock in the morning.

But for the presence and the timely, fearless action of Mr. Teachman, the accident which befell the Gardner car would likely have been fraught with very serious consequences, possibly death of all four car occupants.

Child Star's New Picture A Romance

Shirley Temple Co-Stars With Lionel Barrymore in "The Little Colonel"

The movie news of the day is that America's golden-haired sweetheart arrives in her latest picture.

Shirley Temple, the five-year-old screen miracle who was unknown less than a year ago, and who now ranks among the ten world's outstanding box-office atractions, co-stars with Lionel Barrymore in "The Little Colonel", which begins a 3-day engagement at the Avon Theatre starting Sunday.

Through her marvelous performances in four pictures, Shirley has become the nation's idol, adored by young and old. Her innocent romp through the land of fame is one of the bright fairy-tales of modern days.

Fox Film combed all the available fiction, past and present, for a suitable vehicle for Shirley and found it in one of the "Little Colonel" stories of Annie Fellows Johnston, which have been eagerly read by millions. Drama and comedy, pathos and humor, vie for supremacy in this tale of a wrecked Kentucky family, during the reconstruction era, reunited by the determination of a lilliputian, dimpled colonel.

For the first time in her short, brilliant screen career, Shirley Temple will be presented to the world precisely as she is. A part of the film is shown in Technicolor.

A supporting cast was selected in keeping with the importance of the principals. Among them are names that have glittered on the marquees of Broadway's theatres. They include Evelyn Venable, John Lodge, Sidney Blackmer, William Burress and others. Bill Robinson, the celebrated colored dancer makes his film debut in "The Little Colonel" in a part which, from all reports, gives him the finest chance of his lifetime to display his famed stair dance as it should ideally be performed.

As for Shirley Temple, she acts, sings and dances. Her featured song for "The Little Colonel" is "Love's Young Dream", a melody based on one of the world's oldest-known folk tunes, which was especially popular during the late '70's in which the picture takes place.

It is a De Sylva Production directed by David Butler.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH
Rev. Ralph Webb, Pastor

The first Methodist meeting was held in Addison on September 3, 1835—one hundred years ago. With this in mind in a time when the Greater Methodist Episcopal Church of America in celebrating its sesquicentennial of the 150 years of service on this continent the members and friends of the Addison Methodist Church believe that it is very appropriate to plan a service in recognition of the beginning of Methodism here and also in celebration of a hundred years of effectual service to our town and community.

The organization of the church was not completed until five years later or in 1841, but the seed for this organization was planted at the first meeting held in 1835 in a little old schoolhouse on Goodhue street.

A committee to plan this celebration was recently appointed by the pastor, Rev. Ralph Webb and Tuesday, September 3, 1935, was set apart for the same.

Elaborate plans which seems essential for such an occasion will naturally have to be postponed until the year 1941, and since "The second Annual Home Coming Sunday" is to be on Sunday, September 15, and committees are now at work to make this day even more a home-coming we are sure that the difficulty in having two such events in so short a time will appear to all.

The speakers for the above will be published as soon as possible. The people of Addison are invited to celebrate with us on September 3 and September 15.

Fire Fghters Mingle Over Festive Board

this meeting tonight will be but a prelude to greater success on the morrow". Mr. Kennedy then launched into a lighter vein, striking out with a humorous touch at the expense of the toastmaster which was taken with customary good grace and served to introduce a round of friendly jibes among the fire fighters.

Attorney Crane personally took the floor as the next speaker. He said in part, "I wonder if we as American citizens are not involved in a situation which is more serious than we imagine. There is an old ditty which ends, 'The set of the sails determines which way you shall go.' There is great truth in that.

"You gentlemen here tonight, representing the fire companies of four counties, are the boys who get out at night, who risk life and limb. Why? Because you want to do something for the community in which you live. Because in your hearts you want to do something—voluntarily—for your fellows, for your country. In your hearts you have the ideals or honest, fairless and duty to country. We, the rank and file, the common, ordinary citizen of this nation are proud of our liberties, handed down to us by our forefathers and assured to us, as we thought, for all time. And how? By the Constitution of the United States! And now they are trying to break it down.

"Why, boys, do volunteer firemen go out in freezing weather to fight fires? To protect something that somebody has built up. Ask yourselves, gentlemen, is not the Constitution, built up by the wisdom of liberty-loving forefathers, worth protecting?" Attorney Crane then praised the efficiency and self-sacrifice of the Addison volunteer firemen and commended the work of the local departments in the various communities making up the association.

Fire Chief John McCarthy of Corning was next introduced. He launched into a straight-forward talk on the mechanics of fire fighting, which included the following extracts:) "Why don't every town furnish some means of providing water for the pumpers. Every little town today has its pumper, every town has its water system. Every town has the telephone and good roads. Why not take a step backward and provide with public and private buildings, a cistern of water for emergency use. Then let it remain forever as a constant protection". Chief McCarthy recalled vividly and with present recollections the firemen's association of several decades ago which united the companies of this region. Great pride was taken by each unit, he stated. All units were fully uniformed and presented a striking apperance on parade. Lacking the innovations of the present day they were uniformly efficient and successful in their appointed task of fire fighting.

Mr. Rugaber of Westfield was another speaker. He commended the progress of the organization, accomplished in eight months. The regular monthly meetings are attended, he said, by from twenty to fifty. He predicted that this figure will shortly be raised to seventy or even one hundred, due to the great interest in the organization.

Leslie D. Kimball, managing edito of the Corning Leader, and John M. O'Keefe, chief of the Addison Fire Department and vice-president of the NY-P organization, next responded to the call of the toastmaster. Burrell Vastbinder was then introduced as "a man behind every movement for progress in Addison for years." Mr. Vastbinder drew from his bag of anecdotes to thrust a friendly sally at his baseball contemporary, Neil Cotter, director of the Cornhuskers and manager of the Painted Post Imperials.

A floor show followed the dinner and speeches. A short business meeting brought the gathering to a close.
